Lumberg Welcomes Ten New Trainees

Schalksmühle, 22.8.2014. For the training year which started only after the summer break, Lumberg welcomes ten new trainees, four of whom at the Group's headquarters in Schalksmühle and six at the largest production facility in Cloppenburg.

In Schalksmühle, Turhan Kavakli and Celina Czupper will start their training as an industrial management assistant; Moray Strehlau is training in the occupational field of an IT specialist for system integration, while Jan Niklas Uellenberg has opted to become a toolmaker in the field of punching technology.

Whereas the start into a professional life took place in Cloppenburg in Lower Saxony at the beginning of the month, the trainees in Schalksmühle received their warm welcome on August 18. For a knowledgeable and sound professional future, the trainees will go through a regular rotation system to acquaint themselves with the different fields, departments and locations, in line with their respective occupational profile. They will familiarize themselves with relevant matters that relate to the products made by Lumberg and learn about working in different team structures as well as the flows of a modern industrial operation.
